In a 2009 nationwide survey, about 32% of high school students reported being in a physical fight in the 12 months before the survey. (CDC).

An estimated 20% of high school students reported being bullied on school property in 2009 (CDC).

The victims of teen violence are most often other teenagers.
Teens who commit acts of violence are often involved in other types of risky or criminal behavior.
They may use drugs, carry weapons, driver recklessly and have unsafe sex (U.S. Surgeon General).

Less than 1% of all homicides and suicides among school-age youth occur on school grounds, on the way to or from school, or on the way to or from school sponsor events (Anderson et al 2001).

Researchers have proven, scientifically, that humans are all one people. The colour of our ancestor's skin and ultimately my skin and your skin is a consequence of ultra-violet light, of latitude and climate. Despite our recent sad conflicts here in the U.S. there really is no such thing, scientifically, as race. We are one species. Each of us is much more alike than we are different. We all came from Africa. We're all made of the same star dust. We're all going to live and die on the same planet - a pale blue dot in the vastness of space. We have to work together.

Is There Color?

"A color only exists in your head," Lotto said.
"There's such a thing as light. There's such a thing as energy. There's no such thing as color."
Beau Lotto, professor of neuroscience at University College London, PBS NewsHour Febraury 27, 2015

Color is, quite literally, a figment of your imagination, Lotto said. It only exists in your head. Bevil Conway, a neuroscientist who studies color and vision at Wellesley College, explained it this way:
"Color is this computation that our brains make that enables us to extract meaning from the world."

All human eyes are brown. It all comes Down to melanin and how much of the pigment we have in our eyes. While dark brown in color, melanin absorbs different amounts of light.

There are receptors called cones in our eyes that act like little color channel sensors.
An elaborate network of sophisticated cells in the brain compares the activity of these cones, and then signals from our brain produce the impression of colors.

What is Violence?

Merriam-Webster Dictionary

Exertion of physical force so as to injure or abuse.
Injury by or as if by distortion, infringement, or profanation. undue alteration.

World Heath Organization (WHO)

The intentional use of physical force or power, threatened or actual, against oneself, another person, or against a group or community, that either results in or has a high likelihood of resulting in injury, death, psychological harm, mal-development, or deprivation.

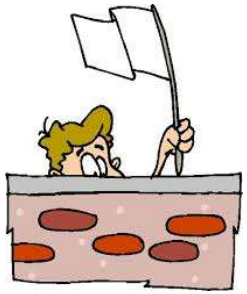
I Don’t Care - The Argument Against Caring About Violence

Violence is Human Nature, it will never change, there is nothing you can do about it, so why try. Don’t care about anything. I Don’t have any Choices. I’m in a no win situation. No one ever accomplished anything with that attitude.



Believing in Humanity and Believing Peace is Possible is the Greatest Weapon Against Violence.

Us Peaceful People are Reaching More People Everyday. Just A Matter of Time

Many who live with violence day in and day out assume that it is a intrinsic part of the human condition. But this is not so. Violence can be prevented. Violent culture can be turned around. Governments, communities and individuals can make a difference . Nelson Mandela 2002

Believe in Youth! Our Hardest Sell

Don’t throw Youth Under the Bus. Never Met a bad kid. Never Figured One Out, Always Surprising, You Never Know. Believing in Youth is Believing in the Future. I believe completely and totally in Youth.

If you insist on being doom and gloom, if you insist your have no choice, if your insist on surrendering to thinking life is awful and the future is worse, if you insist in it’s a no win situation, then at least go out raising the bar. The most courageous and unselfish people I have met were people who were dying. Dying apparently bring out the morality, humanity in you. But why wait till the last second? But we don’t believe in any of this doom and gloom thoughts. An idea is hard to kill, especially a good idea like caring

A Two-Minute Case for Optimism

BY STEVEN PINKER

It's easy to get discouraged by the ceaseless news of violence, poverty, and disease. But the news presents a distorted view of the world. News is about things that happen, not things that don't happen. You never see a TV crew reporting that a country isn't at war, or that a city hasn't had a mass shooting that day, or that millions of 80-year-olds are alive and well.

The only way to appreciate the state of the world is to count. How many incidents of violence, or starvation, or disease are there as a proportion of the number of people in the world? And the only way to know whether things are getting better or worse is to compare those numbers at different times: over the centuries and decades, do the trend lines go up or down?

As it happens, the numbers tell a surprisingly happy story. Violent crime has fallen by half since 1992, and fiftyfold since the Middle Ages. Over the past 60 years the number of wars and number of people killed in wars have plummeted. Worldwide, fewer babies die, more children go to school, more people live in democracies, more can afford simple luxuries, fewer get sick, and more live to old age.

"Better" does not mean "perfect." Too many people still live in misery and die prematurely, and new challenges, such as climate change, confront us. But measuring the progress we've made in the past emboldens us to strive for more in the future. Problems that look hopeless may not be; human ingenuity can chip away at them. We will never have a perfect world, but it's not romantic or naïve to work toward a better one.

Financial Cost

"The United Nations appealed for $6.5 billion for Syria and its neighbors on Monday to help 16 million people next year, many of them hungry or homeless victims of a 33-month-old conflict that has no end in sight. The Syrian appeal accounted for half of an overall funding plan of $12.9 billion to help 52 million people in 17 countries, announced on Monday by U.N. emergency relief coordinator Valerie Amos. "This is the largest amount we have ever had to request at the start of the year," she said. Overall funding plan of $12.9 billion to help 52 million people in 17 countries. The overall U.N. appeal also includes aid to Sudan, South Sudan, Yemen, Democratic Republic of Congo, Afghanistan and the Philippines" (United Nations December 2013)

Defeating Disease

What if you could put an end to a painful or deadly disease? If you could ensure that no one would ever suffer from it again? The goal of wiping out every single case of a disease is ambitious and the challenges are enormous — but the potential benefits are even greater.

To date we've eradicated only one human disease: smallpox. But dedicated health workers around the globe are closing in on others. Guinea worm disease and polio, which once afflicted millions, could soon be gone for good. And efforts are underway to wipe out malaria, river blindness and lymphatic filariasis, also known as elephantiasis.

It won't be easy, but through research, international cooperation, health education — and sheer determination — the suffering caused by these diseases may soon be a distant memory.

Why is There Violence?

What the Experts Say

The American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry (AACAP)

Factors Which Increase Risk of Violent Behavior

Numerous research studies have concluded that a complex interaction or combination of factors leads to an increased risk of violent behavior in children and adolescents. These factors include:

- Previous aggressive or violent behavior
- Being the victim of physical abuse and/or sexual abuse
- Exposure to violence in the home and/or community
- Genetic (family heredity) factors
- Exposure to violence in media (TV, movies, etc.)
- Use of drugs and/or alcohol
- Presence of firearms in home
- Combination of stressful family socioeconomic factors (poverty, severe deprivation, marital breakup, single parenting, unemployment, loss of support from extended family)
- Brain damage from head injury

What are the "warning signs" for violent behavior in children?

Children who have several risk factors and show the following behaviors should be carefully evaluated:

- Intense anger
- Frequent loss of temper or blow-ups
- Extreme irritability
- Extreme impulsiveness
- Becoming easily frustrated

REDEFINING MANHOOD
Most men aren't violent, but 90% of violent crimes are committed by men. The question is why? For too long we've identified masculine strength with violence. But true strength comes from challenging the myth that being a real man means putting up a false front, disrespecting others, and engaging in violent and self-destructive behavior. Let's lose the tough guise and start being real men.

What Is A Real Man? Man = Control. Control of His Life/Existence, Survival.

If you are not in control of your survival, who will? Don't let your survival be taken for granted.

A Real Man is a Man who is control of himself at all times without excuse or exception and will not give up control of himself to anyone or anything for any reason at anytime.

That is what your Internal Identity is for, to maintain complete, absolute control of yourself. Why give up control when no one is superior? Sense?

Opposite of a Real Man Is a Puppet
